What is an Endoscopy?

Endoscopy is a test allowing the physician to examine the lining of the esophagus, stomach and upper portion of the small intestine. Patients are routinely sedated for this exam.

The endoscope is a lighted, flexible tube about ¼" in diameter that is passed through the mouth looking for inflammation, ulcers, tumors, etc. Biopsies (small pieces of tissue) can be obtained during this procedure. These are examined by a pathologist and a written report is sent to our office in 2-5 days. Biopsies are taken for many reasons and do not necessarily mean cancer is suspected.

Why do I need this test?

Endoscopy is an important tool for detecting and evaluating inflammation, ulcers, bleeding, reflux, and other digestive issues.

What are the risks?

Complications of this examination are infrequent but may include bleeding, perforation, reaction to medications, heart/lung complications, and other unpredictable events.
